

A simple idea, told straight.

Give a thumbs up. Or raise a question.

Either way — it goes on the record.

WHERE WE ARE

The platform is built and live.

The user base is what we're raising for.

We're still in beta — everything can change.

It's 2 a.m. An EMT shows up to help your mother.

They are calm. They are fast. They are kind.
You want to thank them.
Where do you go?

THE FLIP SIDE

Same thing works the other way.

If someone didn't do a great job, you can say so. The agency can answer (or not).
The public sees both. The good gets recognized. The bad gets recorded.

That's it. Recognize. Document. On the record.

What’s already working today.

Where this is going.

The next year, in plain English. Soon / Next / Big.

SOON · 3-6 MONTHS

Agency review-request links.

After a 911 call, an ER visit, a DMV appointment — the agency sends a one-tap anonymous review link to the people who were there. Like a restaurant asking for a Google review, except it's your fire department. This is the single biggest growth lever: agencies become the distribution.

NEXT · 6-18 MONTHS

Profiles up the pyramid.

School board, council, mayor are live today. Next: governor, state senate, congress, the president. Higher-level officials get "claim this profile" placeholders until they (or their office) verify — keeps the record fair and avoids empty-profile trolling.

BIG · YEAR TWO

Polls, takes, and public-affairs ratings.

Live now in basic form: people self-ID (Republican / Democrat / Independent), then rate questions like "Should East Ramapo reverse the busing change?" or "Will Congress pass a budget without a shutdown?" Polymarket-style, no money. Built so 50,000 takes happen here instead of in a Gallup phone call.
